

THE MAYOR'S FANCY DRESS BALL.

Vanitas vanitatum. No doubt; but then there are vanities and vanities, and a Fancy Dress Ball such as that which was given by his Worship the Mayor of Sydney (Mr. C. J. Roberts) last night, was such a magnificent and withal such a charming exhibition of vanity, that it must engage something more than the ordinary amount of attention. Representatives of the bland and benignant Peckaniff, whose "particular vanity" takes the form of pineapple rum, rather than "antique pageantry," will look askance at the splendid spectacle of human frailty and folly; but the Mayor of Sydney appears to be one of those who does not hold to the opinion, because some are "virtuous," therefore there shall be no more "cakes and ale;" and we suppose will regard the applause of the gentler half of the community as a set-off against the censures of those who are made of sterner stuff, and regulate their recreations on severely correct principles. Gentlemen who have the hardihood to deny the Divine mission of boat-pulling and cricket playing are sure to declaim against the frippery and nonsense of fancy-dress balls; but are not the poor misanthropes in a miserable minority; and if Thomas Carlyle himself were to take up his parable against the "pomp and feast and revelry" which fills the flow of the exhibition with life and motion, he would be speaking to a gainsaying generation, and would have to take refuge in such consolations as his sarcastic intellect could invent, one of which would, we suppose, be that the population of Sydney consists of "so many thousand souls, 'mostly fools.'" Mr. Buchanan and Mr. John Stewart will perceive that the "gallery" fully recognize the gravity of that utilitarian philosophy of which they may be supposed to be the exponents; and if, therefore, in what follows we seem to amplify overmuch the details of the gorgeous pageant, some allowance must be made for the fascination of a scene which eclipsed all former exhibitions of the same kind in brilliance, gaiety, and picturesquo combinations. The ball has been the topic of conversation in home circles for the past month, and will doubtless be the theme of society gossip for weeks to come. Mr. Roberts has much to answer for; and it really seems as if his munificent hospitality would make the incumbency of the Mayoral chair impossible to any but the most wealthy and genial of the city's representatives. It must be admitted, however, that his colleagues in the Council display no symptoms of meanness on that score, for last night the Fathers of the City, arrayed in their new livery, worthily supported their chairman in doing the honours of the occasion.

The times are said to be "had," and money "tight," but Mayoral munificence has, combined with 20 per cent. discounts, produced a wonderful laxity of many people's purse strings, and (as from the vantage ground of that part of the gallery which the Mayor has considerately reserved for the Press) we look down upon the motley crowd of poets, philosophers, warriors, princes, brigands, queens, gipsies, flower girls, maids, &c.—in fact all sorts and conditions of

we find it utterly impossible to think of any tightness of the chest, we may be poisoned. We dare hazard the suggestion, that while the sober portion of the community were scanning these paragraphs over their coffee, some scores of the youths and beauties who graced the Exhibition Building last night were dreaming of the transient joys of the scene, or speculating upon the joyous anticipations of the next festival. A thing of beauty is said to be a joy for ever, and on the strength of that undeniable truth we refuse to believe that Paterfamilias is haunted by visions of remorseless duns and milliners bills.

Inconspicuous among the guests were his Excellency Sir Charles Robinson and Lady Robinson, Captain St. John, St. John, Miss Robinson, the Hon. H. S. Littleton, Alfred Stephen, Commodore Wilson, the Hon. the Member (Sir Henry Pikes), with other members of the family, and many members of both Houses of Parliament. Arrangements for the vehicular traffic, were that the procession should enter Devonshire-street from George-street, in rank, — passence into Castlereagh-street, enter by the gate in the northern end, pass round the side of the exhibition building to the south or entrance, where the guests were to alight,—and so the gate opposite to Dr. Chalmers' Church. The arrangement was carried out so admirably, that no inconvenience was occasioned. About 35 foot police Superintendent Read and Sub-inspector Rushton about 8 mounted troopers under Sergeant-major Thos. were duty for the preservation of order. Neat alarums foot police were stationed within the park, no passengers were allowed to be under any pretence, with the troopers, were disposed along Castlereagh to keep a passage for the vehicles through the crowd most blocked up that thoroughfare. Seven of the City Corporation were distributed within the enclosure to prevent people from gaining unauthorised admission. The inspectorial staff of the Police Transit Commission regulated the traffic interests. The procession of vehicles began punctually at half-past 8 o'clock, when the gates were opened, and it was half past 9, before the last of the rank entered the grounds. The vehicles were of many sorts, and included private two-wheeled and four-wheeled cabs, even heavy lumbering omnibuses. It required amount of energy on the part of the traffic and the police to maintain unbroken a procession of about a mile in length, but it was satisfactorily done. Some impatient and impudent ventured to drive high up along the ranks, opportunity to fall in, but their career was soon over, they were compelled to retire to the rear of the crowd in Castlereagh-street was not much space being limited the people were packed close. Devonshire-street, almost as far as the corner, was lined on both sides with spectators, in a sight of the costumes of the gentry, passage through this avenue of human bustle, excessively trying, for the vulgar crowd stared into the vehicles, and when some of our appearance came into view they

The stage was appropriated to the band. In the centre of the canopy, was the coat-of-arms of the city of Sydney, and the base of the stage was ornamented with a choice collection of exotics from the Botanic Gardens. From standards in the gallery, wreaths of evergreen were hung along the galleries, along the centre, and across the ball room. There were upwards of seven hundred yards of this wreathing, and the manner in which it was disposed was extremely artistic and pleasing. In a central position on the western side of the ball-room there was a pavilion set apart for his Excellency the Governor. It commanded an excellent view of the ball-room, and was furnished with admirable taste. In each of the columns there were placed chifforiers and mirrors, with suitable ornaments. Special boudoirs were provided for his Excellency and suite in the vestibule at the southern end of the building; and that reserved for the Mayor in the gallery in front of the organ was also extremely beautiful. The wings of the building were reserved as supper rooms, which were divided from the ball room by drapery, panelled with red, white, and blue, and the entrances to which were under muslin curtains festooned at the sides. To detail the various decorations more minutely would probably be tedious, but we may state generally that the furniture was of the most costly description, and the minor ornaments were in admirable taste.

As we have said, the doors were open for the admission of the guests shortly before half-past 8 o'clock, and from that time until after 10 o'clock, the tide of visitors flowed into the building without intermission. The guests as they entered into the lobby found that the cloak-room for the ladies was to the right, gentlemen to the left, and having disposed of their outer wraps and smoothed down their plummage, they were prepared to enter the dancing saloon. His Worship the Mayor stood ready to receive his visitors, attended by Mrs. Roberts, and Mr. R. Driver (City solicitor). The cards being handed to Mr. Driver, that gentleman announced each arrival to the Mayor and Mayoress, who graciously received them with a bow as they passed. Considering that this ceremony had to be repeated some fifteen hundred times it must be admitted that even greatness has its drawbacks. However our worthy and urbane Mayor and his fair partner bowed and smiled to the last, looking as though they were quite prepared to sacrifice themselves at the shrine of hospitality. Still, it is a long lane that has no turning, and the tide does not flow for ever in the same direction. The stream of arrivals had already begun to slacken at 10 o'clock—and indeed by that time the building looked very comfortably filled. Precisely at 10 o'clock, the announcement was made that the Governor and party were at hand. The Mayor and Mayoress at once proceeded to the entrance to receive the illustrious visitors, and in a minute or two the Mayor entered the hall leading in Lady Robinson, followed by Sir Hercules and the Mayoress, and Miss Robinson, Captain and Mrs. St. John, Hon. H. S. Littleton, and the rest of the party from Government House. The band, as the Vice-regal party entered, struck up the National Anthem, for which they almost immediately substituted "Rule Britannia," in compliment to Lady Robinson, who represented to perfection the great Ruler of the Waves.

After sufficient time had been given for the Governor and his party to prepare, the dancing commenced. The ball was opened with the following quadrille: The Mayor and Lady Robinson lead off with Sir Hercules and the Mayoress as vis-à-vis; the third and fourth couples being Sir Alfred Stephen with Mrs. Reed, and Commodore Wilson with Miss St. John. The following is the programme of the

The music was played by the excellent band of the Permanent Force, under sergeant Pennell. Mr. Alfred Read, of Castlereagh-street, made a most efficient master of the ceremonies, aided and assisted by Mr. S. Stead and Mr. G. Buckleton. Under the able management of these ubiquitous gentlemen "all went merry as a marriage bell." The programmes, printed in gold and colours by Messrs. S. T. Leigh and Co., were really works of art.

The appearance of the ball room, even at an early period of the evening, was very imposing; indeed it may be fairly said that the like has never before been seen in Sydney.

The guests no sooner began to arrive than they fell into interesting and picturesque groups, the colours of the dresses blending or contrasting most agreeably to the eye, and the various attitudes of the wearers becoming more and more striking. Entering the vestibule of the building, and passing by the dais where the Mayor and the Mayoress were stationed to receive the guests, the people fell into a double rank of sightseers, who formed a lane stretching from the Mayor's dais to the fountain in the centre of the room, bent upon viewing the fancy dresses and their wearers as they came into the ball-room, or else broke off into couples and strolled among the ferns and flowers and round about the fountain, whose gentle waterfall fell whisperingly in the midst of a bower of leaves and plants and pretty roses, all made fairy-like by gas devices that looked like stars. As the hour grew later the guests began to arrive in larger numbers, the little groups increased, and gradually the room was crowded. Nothing could be prettier than the couples which gathered in particular parts of the room where the decorations lent their aid to make the dresses of the people more attractive than in themselves they were. With taste and art large oval mirrors had been set against the gallery pillars, decked with bouquets of flowers, and sly devices in the bewitching language of love, and here, resting from the promenade or the dance on chairs placed for the purpose, the picturesque couples not only found the ease they sought, but as regarded the aspects they presented realized to the eye of the observer many of the ideas of old romance. All the characters of any note that ever lived seemed represented, and for once the people of all the world were present in all their variety and all their charm. His Worship, the Mayor appeared, of course, in his robes of office, and did the honours of the evening splendidly. The Mayoress was dressed magnificently in a dress of cream satin, handsomely trimmed with Roman pearls, seaweed fringe, and Brussels point lace; and her headdress was a very handsome one of ostrich feathers. With this beautiful attire she wore as jewellery pearls and diamonds. The dress and headdress were from the establishment of Messrs. Farmer and Company. "Britannia" appeared more conspicuous than any character in the ballroom, in the person of the Hon. Lady Robinson: who, with her fine statly figure, wearing the ter in the ballroom, in the person of the Hon. Lady Robinson; who, with her fine statly figure, wearing the helmet and bearing the tridcut, attracted general attention. Her dress consisted of gold armour, breast-plate, and body; skirt of fine white cashmere, very handsomely trimmed with gold, and an underskirt of the same; a scarlet toga, trimmed with gold; a gold helmet, with crimson comb; a shield, quartered with blue, silver, and gold, and trift. His Excellency Sir Hercules Robinson appeared as Captain Cook, very faithfully reproduced, from the Dance picture at Greenwich Hospital, by Mr. Millett, of George-street. The coat was of dark blue cloth, turned back with white, and the vest and knee breeches were of white kerseymerre, the whole uniform being splendidly trimmed with gold lace. The idea of appearing in the character of the famous navigator just at this time, when the ceremony of unveiling the statue of Captain Cook is very near at hand, was an exceedingly happy one, and one that was much appreciated. Miss Robinson was attired as "an Ancient Saxon." Her dress was of white cashmere, trimmed with gold, and a blue toga trimmed with gold. The dresses of both the Hon. Lady Robinson and Miss Robinson were made after Lacey's costumes by the costumiers at the Theatre Royal. Mrs. St. John assumed the character of Marguerite de Valois, and Captain St. John wore the uniform of an officer of the British Army. Commodore Wilson was present in his naval uniform of Commodore and A.D.C. to her Majesty the Queen, and Mrs. Wilson wore the dress of a Newhaven Fishwife. The Hon. Sir Henry Parkes, K.C.M.G., wore the uniform of a member of the Executive Council, with the insignia of K.C.M.G. Lady Parkes appeared in evening dress, and two Misses Parkes were present as "Night" and "Daughter of the Mountains." The Hon. Sir Alfred Stephen, K.C.M.G., appeared as the "Man of "Tis Sixty Years Since," and with him were Miss Alice Stephen as a Finland Peasant, and Miss Mary Stephen as "Mistress Mary quite contrary." The Hon. Saul Samuel, C.M.G., wore a uniform, and Mrs. Samuel appeared in the costume of Lady Jane Grey. One of the most effective and prettiest dresses in the room was that of Miss Samuel, as a Chinese lady, the whole make-up being particularly good. Other attractive costumes in the room—costumes from the establishment of Messrs. Farmer and Company—were the following:—Mrs. Jennings, lady of the time of Henry IV. (1572), in a magnificent brocade of pink and cardinal, trimmed with gold and Roman pearls, with pearl ornaments in hair; Mrs. Chapman, as Mary Queen of Scots, in rich black velvet and cream brocade, with Roman pearls, and white satin sleeves; Mrs. John Wood, lady of time of Francis I. (1530), in a magnificent black velvet dress, trimmed with fur and brocade, with coronet of pearls, and tulle veil; Mrs. Samuel Cohen, as Anne of Austria, in a rich striped brocade, trimmed with gold and pearls; Miss Garrett, as Canada—a white skirt trimmed with

scarf, white wig, and three-cornered black hat, trimmed with handsome white feather, with drum; Miss Clinch, in a cabaretier red silk skirt trimmed with black velvet, upper skirt pale blue, bodice black velvet trimmed with blue and red, and a white muslin apron; Miss Pearse, Polish Snow, in white silk, with swansdown strewed over to represent snow, Polish cap with white tassel; Miss Jessie Pearse, a white cashmere dress trimmed with blue satin and gold fringe, blue satin apron trimmed with lace, body blue and white satin, and high white muslin cap; Mrs. Thomas, Arcadian Shepherdess, white tulle skirt trimmed with blue bows and blue convolvulus, bodice of blue silk trimmed with lace, straw hat trimmed with flowers, and a crook trimmed with ribbons and flowers; Mrs. Smith, Eastern lady, in a superb dress of blue velvet, white satin, and crimson satin, beautifully braided in gold and trimmed gold fringe, and a spangled tulle veil; Mrs. John Hardy, Marguerite de Valois (1525), in a magnificent black satin, trimmed handsomely with gold, and gold spangled cap and gold feather; Mrs. Alderson, a Lombardy peasant, in a rich crimson and blue silk, trimmed with gold and plum-coloured velvet, straw hat with feathers to match; Miss Martin, a huntress, in a black velvet dress with long hanging sleeves lined with white silk drapery, trimmed with gold fringe, white felt hat trimmed with gold, and handsome white feather; Miss Harris, "Mary, Mary, quite contrary," in pink quilted skirt, trimmed with pretty girls, silver bells, and cockleshells, and cowslips, and buttercups; Miss Hart, Breton peasant, black velvet, and pale blue satin and silver; Mrs. Holt, Puritan lady; One of the most attractive costumes in the room was that of Mrs. J. H. White, who appeared dressed as Marie Antoinette. Other dresses might have been more gorgeous; but in none had greater attention been paid to detail, and in none was there evident a more complete reproduction of the costumes of the age it represented. Mr. Whistler, the American artist, would probably call it a nocturne in blue brocade, delicate Brussels lace, sable fur, pearls and gold lace. The lady wore the snowy wig (a la Marquise) of the period, the powder and the patches which impart such brilliancy to the complexion; and the costume was completed by a hat, heavy, with sweeping white ostrich plumes; Mrs. Fitz-Wentworth wore a Louis Seize costume of pale mauve brocade, trimmed with gold lace, a most effective dress; Mrs. G. Lee was an English lady of the 16th Century, and Miss Lee an English Princess of the time of Henry the Eighth. A very beautiful costume was that of a lady who dressed as the Grand Duchess of Gerolstein; it was of amber brocade, faced with crimson damask and trimmed with silver bullion and ermine fur. Mr. J. H. White was Sultan Abdul and shone resplendent in a flowered green brocade robe lined with crimson damask, trimmed with sable fur and gold lace and profusely jewelled. Mr. S. Cook, of the S. M. Herald, appeared as Garibaldi, the dress being perfect as regards detail and attractiveness. Mr. G. R. Dibbs as a Chinese Governor of Canton; Mr. S. A. Joseph was a Chinese Mandarin, and the Press was represented by dancers who were dressed in the Herald, the Echo, and the Evening News. Some of the most conspicuous of the fancy dresses among the gentlemen were the following, made by Messrs. Farmer and Co.:—Hon. F. B. Sutton, as gentleman of the 17th century—rich black velvet jacket, sleeves fished with pink satin and slashed with gold braid, front and hips slashed with gold braid, waist belt looped of rich amber satin, shoulder belt of ruby velvet with gold buckle, collar of costly point lace, trunk hose of ruby velvet trimmed with gold braid and handsome point lace, silk stockings, shoes with rose-satin rosettes and golden heads, hat with ostrich plume, gauntlets trimmed with point lace, sword and gold sword knot. Mr. J. Williamson in a Court dress, early part of the present century: Single-breasted coat of black velvet, trimmed with gold braid and gold buttons; white satin vest, trimmed with gold braid; point lace ruffles, black velvet pants and silk stockings; shoes with neat gold buckle; wig of the period. Mr. S. J. Toogood as Paris (Romeo and Juliet): Rich brocaded blue satin tunic, gold embroidered; point lace ruffle; scarlet velvet cloak, trimmed gold braid; scarlet skull cap, and scarlet silk tights, with shoes and buckle.

velvet cloak, trimmed gold braid; scarlet skull cap, and scarlet silk tights, with shoes and buckle. Mr. W. J. Clarke, as a page, period Charles V. of France—green satin tunic with scarlet sleeves, shoulder belt of ruby velvet, edged gold lace, parti-coloured silk tights, shaped skull cap, bordered with gold studs, and two ostrich feathers, shoes with straps; Mr. J. Aloock, Lieutenant's undress uniform, 60th Rifles—tunic of rifle green slashed with black braid, trousers of rifle green cloth with stripe of black mohair braid, sword and sword knot, forage cap of rifle green, white kid gloves; Mr. J. Phillips—regulation Court dress,—dress coat of mulberry cloth with silver braid, silver stars at collar, silver slashings on sword flaps, white satin vest, trousers of mulberry cloth with silver stripe at side, regulation cocked hat, sword, and sword knot; Mr. Wolfe, as gentleman, period George III.—dress coat of maroon cloth with gilt buttons, slashed mohair braid, pantaloons of French grey cashmere, vest of straw cashmere, knee-boots, ruffled shirt, and hat and stick of the period—a very stylish and effective costume; Mr. W. Robertson, as Henry IV. of France, black brocaded silk tunic, ruff of Maltese lace, breast order magnificent cross set with brilliants, trunk hose of brocaded silk, cloak of black Lyons velvet with clasp set with diamonds, black satin tights and shoes bound, gold braid, velvet hat with plume and order in diamonds; Mr. J. Hart, as a Spanish gentleman, jacket of ruby velvet, trimmed gold braid sleeves fished with Maltese lace, trunk hose and gaiters of same material, flesh-coloured tights, white felt hat and shoes with pink rosettes and gold buckle; Mr. Allison, as a Persian chief—tunic of amber silk reaching almost to the feet, outer robe of green satin, trimmed with gold braid, handsome gold necklace, Persian cap and shoes, decidedly one of the most effective dresses in the room; Mr. E. W. Tange, as a Spanish bull-fighter—jacket of cerise velvet trimmed with gold braid, blue silk tie and sash, drab cashmere pantaloons, felt hat with scarlet and blue band, staff, and shoes with gilt buckle; Mr. J. Pope, as a Grand Turk, vestment of blue satin edged gold braid, tunic of cerise satin fished with scarlet, cape of scarlet plush, trousers of same, handsome turban with crescent set with gold beads, richly chased scimitar; Mr. R. B. Smith, as a Spanish Count, black velvet tunic trimmed with silver, white silk tights, cloak of black velvet bound with silver braid, velvet hat, sword, sword knot, shoes and buckles; Mr. Alfred Pope, as Masiello, white shirt with tricolor slashings, blue velvet breeches, silk hose, aboos, and fisherman's hat. It was noticeable that there were many similar characters in the ball-room, many of the dresses chosen being favourite ones with everybody, and such as suit many people. Thus Lady Teazle and Sir Peter had numerous representatives. Othello found his occupation again in a dozen different representatives. Many sailors were present, and Madame Pompadour appeared in the persons of more than a score of ladies. The Kings of Clubs, Spades, Diamonds, and Hearts, were there, and other kings and queens were in the room in plenty. But notwithstanding this the general appearance of the company, who numbered nearly 2000, was extremely interesting.

Messrs. Compagnoni and Co. were called upon to fill the offices of caterers, and it would be difficult to imagine any firm more readily responding to the demand made upon them. To satisfy the requirements of nearly two thousand persons was no ordinary task. It was one requiring such resources as this firm has at its disposal. Nothing appeared wanting in the vast display of viands prepared for the occasion; and everything supplied seemed of the best order. A staff of waiters numbering about seventy were present, under the personal direction of Mr. C. R. Smith. Each seemed active and desirous of pleasing, and certainly in such a gathering their obliging dispositions were almost continually exercised. The refreshments were arranged on each side of the immense hall, and the tables on which they were spread extended almost from one end of the building to the other. The scenes around them were as brilliant as the scenes in the dancing space, although now to the other. The scenes around them were as brilliant as the scene in the dancing space, although perhaps not quite so animated. It was quite a treat to saunter through the crowd here, for fine opportunities were offered for a close inspection of the magnificent costumes that graced the scene. All the tables were attractively laid out, and seemed to bear all the delicacies of the season in the shape of the choicest fruits. Elaborate displays of the pastrycook's art were placed at intervals on the tables and bouquets of flowers lent enchantment to the general effect. Special attention appeared to have been given to the selection of wines, the brands, variety, and qualities showing that the taste of a connoisseur had been consulted. Indeed, taken altogether, it would be difficult to prepare a more delicate and appetising spread, or one in which the tastes of visitors would be more generally studied and gratified.

The galleries, which were fitted up with seats and card tables, were very much resorted to, especially between the dances, as the air in this part of the building was particularly cool and refreshing, owing to the fact of the upper windows being open all round the building. Besides, the view that was obtained from the galleries of the moving mass of variegated colour below was more than worth the trouble of ascending the stairs to see. At all events, whether above or below, in the galleries, or on the floor, everyone seemed to enjoy themselves, and it may well be doubted whether one single individual present would remember ever in his or her life having spent so pleasant a night; and it may be safely predicted that many a long day will pass before so thoroughly enjoyable a night will succeed it. The Mayor's Fancy Dress Ball of 1879 will long live in the memory of the citizens as an event that leaves nothing but agreeable recollections behind.
